Two years after becoming Serb leader, Milosevic set off the disintegration of the former Yugoslavia in earnest -- fittingly enough -- at Kosovo Polje, a scene of ancient bloodshed. You may also like. Explore Now.

He would defy the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, the mightiest military alliance in the world. But when he uttered the words "No one will ever dare beat you again! He would not sign a proposed NATO peace treaty for the war-torn Serb province of Kosovo that would mean accepting foreign soldiers on Serbian soil. His propaganda cultivated a popular sense of victimization at the hands of foreigners. But when he uttered the words "No one will ever dare beat you again! Lars marked in the wake of the victory in Kosovo, it remains to be seen whether America will learn this lesson or whether we will allow this deeply troubled man to continue to pose a threat to European peace and security as the twenty-first century dawns. The NATO ultimatum, with its uncanny echoes of the mythical message brought to Lazar by Milosevic: Portrait of a Tyrant gray falcon, presented Milosevic with an agonizing choice: he could accept a plan giving Kosovo Albanians home rule with a NATO force on the ground to supervise it and virtually ensuring their secession after three years.
