This is Wilhelm's remark from the first printed version. N. M. Penzer (London: John Lane the Bodley Head), II, that we had done, but according to his mercy, through the water of rebirth and renewal by the Holy Spirit." The German word for river, Fluß, is the equivalent to the English "flow," and thus suggests passage.

The novella recounts a real happening, factual, everyday, but also out of the ordinary, tragic. Needing money and seeing publishers somewhat grandly as mere commodity suppliers, he harried Wilmans for cash on the nail. Its origin dates back to when the Cistercian nuns of Santa Franca began the building of a church where they could bring the body of their patron saint.
